DEATH OF M. GAMBETTA.

Only echo the sentiments of the civilised world in expressing our profound sorrow at the news of the early death of M. Leon Gambetta, the eminent French statesman, which was received by telegram from London this morning. A wire was received yesterday to the effect that the modern Dictator of France was seriously ill, and the news of the fatal termination of his illness comes upon us with alarming suddenness. Leon Gambetta was born at Cahors, of a Genoese family, October 30th, 1838. Adopting the legal profession, he became a member of the Paris bar in 1859, and soon acquired fame as a forensic orator, being much employed in political causes, both in the capital and the provinces, while he obtained immense popularity among the various classes of the Parisians on account of his advanced Republican opinions. In March, 1869, on the occasion of the prosecution of the Emancipation newspaper at Toulouse, the young and eloquent orator received a most enthusiastic reception in the south. At the general election held that year, M. Gambetta stood for Paris and Marcellines, as a representative of the "irreconcilable opposition," and was returned for both constituencies, but elected to take his seat for Marcellines. In January, 1870, he made a violent attack on the Ministry, declaring that the day would come when the majority of the people would be put upon their feet, and succeed in establishing a Republic. On the fall of the Empire and the consequent formation of the Government of the National Defence in September, 1870, he was nominated Minister of the Interior, and soon showed that he possessed administrative powers of a high order. When a serious misunderstanding took place between the Delegate Government at Tours and the National Defence Committee in Paris, regarding the contemplated election of deputies, M. Gambetta was selected by his colleagues to proceed to the former city and explain the position of affairs in the capital. Accordingly he left Paris on Oct. 1870, in a balloon named the "Armand-Barbes," accompanied by a secretary and an aeronaut, passed safely over the Prussian lines, and reached Rouen in the evening. Proceeding without loss of time to Tours, he there assumed the direction, and for some months was virtually Dictator of all those provinces of France which were free from the German invaders. He urged the people to continued resistance, raised the Army of the Loire, and after the Delegate Government had been obliged to remove to Bordeaux, he issued a proclamation advocating war to the knife, and resistance even to complete exhaustion. It is scarcely necessary to add that his dream of driving out the Prussians was not realized, and that his volunteer armies were completely crushed by the well-trained forces of the enemy. On Feb. 6, 1871, M.M. Arago, Garnier-Pagès, and Eugene Pelletan, members of the Paris Government, arrived at Bordeaux, bringing with them a decree signed by all the members of the Government, which annulled that of M. Gambetta, by which certain classes of electors were disqualified as candidates for the Assembly. In consequence of this decree, M. Gambetta at once resigned his functions. Shortly afterwards he proceeded to Spain, and resided there for some months in seclusion, but he has since returned to France and obtained a seat in the Assembly, where he is regarded as leader of the Radical wing of the Republican party. His political conduct has been characterised by moderation and reserve, but nevertheless he has constantly directed his efforts to one object—the definitive establishment of the Republic. In Sept., 1872, he made a kind of Democratic "Progress" of the South of France, receiving a semi-official welcome from the municipal authorities. He delivered a famous speech at Grenoble, which was regarded as a manifesto and programme of the Red party amounting to a declaration of war against the Government of the National Assembly. Another famous speech of his was delivered at Aix in January, 1876. At the close of the year 1877 M. Gambetta paid a visit to Rome, and had private conferences with the leading statesmen of the Italian Kingdom. On September 11th, 1877, he was condemned by the eleven members of the Tribunal of Paris to three months imprisonment and to pay a fine of 2,000 francs, for having said of Marshal MacMahon, at a private meeting at Lille, that after the next elections the President of the Republic must either submit or resign—"Il faudra ou se soumettre, ou se démettre." M. Gambetta was also prosecuted for his circular to the electors of the twentieth arrondissement of Paris. Judgment was pronounced on Oct. 12, two days before the election, M. Gambetta being condemned to three months imprisonment and to pay a fine of 4,000 francs. Two days later he was elected Deputy for the twentieth arrondissement. In the discussion in the Chamber respecting the election of M. de Fourton (November 18th, 1878), M. Gambetta called that statesman a liar. This unparliamentary expression led to their fighting a duel with pistols at Plessis Piquet, about five miles from the Tuilleries. The encounter was a perfectly harmless one, and it was blotted that blank cartridges were used with the connivance of the seconds. M. Gambetta held the office of Premier under M. Grevy, and about a couple of years ago was a strenuous opponent of France. Since his retirement from the government he has continued to take an active share in the political affairs of the country, as leader of the republican party, and signs were not wanting to show that his return to office was a mere question of time. By the untimely death of M. Gambetta, France loses her most eminent statesman.

Commercial.

THIS DAY.

We take this opportunity of wishing our friends of the Stock Exchange, all and sundry, a very happy and prosperous New Year.

Although share business has to some extent been generally resumed this morning, very little of importance has yet transpired. The resolutions recently adopted by the shareholders of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation has rendered it necessary that our quotation list, as far as that particular stock is concerned, should be slightly amended. We think that the best and most intelligible method will be to place the scrip under two distinct headings—"Ex-New Issue" and "New Issue," until the full amount of the shares are paid up. The old scrip is at present in good demand at 145 per cent. premium—as this column is written for business men and financiers it is hardly necessary for us to explain that this is equivalent in the old style to 175—but there are no sellers at the rate. Deducting the two pounds dividend which will be declared next month—that is, eight percent—the quotation for the new scrip may be set down at 137 per cent. premium; although so far as we are aware, no business has been done, and there are no buyers at the rate. Sales in the scrip of the Yangtze Insurance Association at 890 taels per share have been reported from Shanghai. It is rather difficult to accurately define the position held by Docks. There are sellers for cash at 53 per cent. premium, and buyers at 52. For the end of the month a fair number of shares might be placed at 53. Steamboats are still in good favor; but no shares can be obtained at 31 per share premium, which is the highest rate offered. Hotels remain very firm at annexed quotations, and so much confidence is generally felt in the future prospects of this company that we are quite prepared to see a much higher rate quoted before long. Luzons are rather firmer than when we last wrote, and we fancy that a slightly higher figure than 109 could be obtained, were holders anxious to sell. Ice is somewhat weaker, with sellers at 165.

4 o'clock p.m.

Nota single transaction has been reported since we last wrote.
